Rangers Youth Development Ltd - a new dawn, or a disaster waiting to happen?

Following widespread, and often heated, debate among Rangers Supporters (and not just Trust Members) regarding this new venture, it seems that this looks like nothing more than an accounting trick to help minimise the Club's current cash flow problems.

At best, we find this proposal confusing, and seek much needed clarity. It does not appear to be a sustainable business model, nor is it a model we'd particularly like to see applied to our vital youth team/structure. Indeed, at a time when it is vital for the Club to secure the goodwill of the fans, we are astonished to witness this development, although we accept that this might be due to poor presentation on the part of the Club, but the onus is on them to present the facts and rationale properly in order that fans may make a reasoned judgment.

This initial lack of enthusiasm (as opposed to the outright hostility we have seen from some websites) should not be construed as any lack of confidence in George Adams, the Head of Youth Development, whose record stands up to any form of scrutiny, or criticism of the four investors who are undoubtedly well-meaning, and whose commitment to Rangers is also commendable.
